

#CREweek

Q&A with William Puzak:

How did you learn about corporate real estate as a career option?

Early in college I interned for an industrial real estate developer and learned not only about the development process but also the asset management side of the industry and the opportunities to add value through efficient building and portfolio management. Given that every doorway we walkthrough involves real estate, I think it's an attractive profession.

Why might you choose corporate real estate for your career?

I'm drawn to real estate because, unlike many other investment instruments, it's a tangible asset that is illiquid, hard to value, and can create value by executing thoughtful management strategies. As a hands-on learner these are attractive attributes.

William Puzak

Senior undergrad student at the University of Denver. Majoring in real estate with a concentration in real estate finance. Planned graduation: June 2021.

CORENET
GLOBAL